

A photograph of a road construction site. A large, irregular pothole is visible in the center of the frame, where the dark asphalt surface has been removed, exposing the light-colored gravel base. A wooden plank is placed horizontally across the pothole. To the left of the pothole, the road surface is dark asphalt with several parallel yellow painted lines. To the right, the road surface is a lighter, greyish material, possibly concrete or a different type of gravel. The overall scene suggests a road repair or construction project in progress.
